

WHITewater FARMS

850 ACRES | $5,900,000 | LAGRANGE, GEORGIA

PROPERTY OVERVIEW

Whitewater Farms is a best in class, turn-key recreational property, southwest of Atlanta near LaGrange, Georgia. The farm contains 850 acres of rolling topography along Whitewater Creek that has been developed over the last 2 decades into a highly-managed and manicured hunting property. It includes a furnished 7,400 SF main home that was built by the current owner that is supported by a guest lodge and a large equipment shop and pole barn. The farm has excellent timber resources comprised largely of old-growth hardwood bottoms and mature loblolly pine plantations. Whitewater Creek is a major creek that runs through the entire length of the property and feeds directly into the Chattahoochee River at West Point Lake. Numerous other creeks and drainages feed into Whitewater Creek and provide excellent topography and natural features that make the farm unique and beautiful. Prescribed burning, an extensive internal road system, strategically placed food plots and professional timber management have produced excellent wildlife habitat throughout the farm and enhance the farms' ideal natural features.

LOCATION

Whitewater Farms is located near the town of LaGrange, Georgia in Troup County. Between Whitewater and LaGrange lies beautiful West Point Lake which was formed by the Army Corps of Engineers via a dam on the Chattahoochee River. Troup County is nestled between Harris and Meriwether Counties along the border of Alabama and Georgia in the piedmont region of Georgia. Callaway Gardens is located just 20 miles to the south in Harris County and attracts 750,000 visitors annually. It is most widely known for its natural beauty, gardens, golf and resort but is also known for its trophy whitetail deer. Collectively, this area is home to numerous well-managed hunting properties and represents the most prominent hunting and recreational area within an hour of Atlanta. These 3 counties share similar characteristics of abundant water resources, rolling topography and outstanding whitetail genetics and fertile soils and consistently produce trophy whitetails along with excellent turkey hunting.

The closest major city is Atlanta, just over an hour to the northeast. While Atlanta is perhaps best known for its trophy traffic, Hartsfield-Jackson Airport is just 60 miles to the north allowing easy access to the Farm via a less congested route to the south of the airport via I-85. Whitewater Farms convenient location provides easy access not only to residents of Atlanta via car but also the entire US via Atlanta's airport or private aircraft via LaGrange's Callaway airport.

The town of LaGrange is a prosperous and charming town with a population of 31,500 with a quality regional medical facility, LaGrange Callaway Airport with an FBO and 6,500' airstrip plus LaGrange College. The college was founded in 1831 and is the oldest private college in Georgia. Numerous upscale restaurants, stores, parks and services provide all the necessary conveniences to support the Farm along with its owners and guests for short and long stays.

USE, WILDLIFE AND CONSERVATION

Whitewater has been placed under a conservation easement with the Georgia Alabama Land Trust ensuring this great place will remain the same for future generations. The easement has been thoughtfully drafted with 35 acres surrounding the main home excluded from the easement. Under the easement, the property can be split up to 4 times and 3 more houses can be built. The Owner retains full silvicultural and agricultural rights along with all rights to construct and maintain roads and develop and maintain wildlife habitat. An easement of this type is a major asset to the farm and its legacy. The farm also enjoys excellent neighbors which contribute to the neighborhood.

The Chattahoochee River corridor south of Atlanta has long been recognized as a prized wildlife corridor and a retreat and haven for residents of Atlanta looking to experience quality hunting, fishing and outdoor recreation with close proximity to home. The wildlife at Whitewater have thrived due to this prominent location and the active management of its Owners. The farm has a diverse habitat structure with a good balance of hardwood bottoms, large creeks and well managed uplands that is ideal for a variety of wildlife. This diversity makes wildlife management rewarding and yields above average returns. Whitewater has primarily been managed for trophy whitetails and turkey in the past but many more opportunities could be expanded upon here.

BROKER COMMENT

“This farm will be a rewarding place to manage wildlife, to enjoy the peace, beauty and solitude of nature and get away from the busyness of life. The natural features and habitat that exist here can not be easily replicated and take decades to establish, they contribute greatly to the value of Whitewater. It is secluded and private yet close enough to Atlanta and LaGrange to stay connected when desired. It is an exceptional recreational property!”
